Victoria Ellis, a prominent figure in local tech business circles, was found dead in her office at approximately 12:00 AM, shortly after hosting a celebratory event at The Grand Loft earlier that evening. There were signs of a brief struggle near her desk, but no visible signs of forced entry. The door to the office was locked, and the room was dimly lit, as if someone had adjusted the lighting.

The victim's body was discovered slumped near the desk, with indications of poisoning as the probable cause of death, pending toxicology reports. Victoria had been seen leaving her party early, reportedly feeling unwell, and headed to her office before going home. A recent prescription bottle with faint traces of residue was found in her purse.
